PEER REVIEW POLICY

- All research articles proposed for publishing in JGPCD have undergone rigorous peer review, based on initial editors screening and reviewing by at least two anonymous reviewers.
- Consequently, the peer review process respects the originality and personal opinions of the authors, but Editorial Board reserves the right to demand changes of the form or content of the papers if these are necessary in order to preserve the high quality and competitiveness of the journal.
- The main selection criteria are: the topical interest of the subject, its relevance to the target groups of the journal, its contribution to the promotion of excellence in education and research in the field of International Relations, European Studies, Political Sciences, and Cultural Diplomacy.

DEDIC POSITION

- The ideas in the papers represent the views of the authors only, not the views of the Centre for European Dialogue and Cultural Diplomacy or of Editors.

COPYRIGHT RULES

- JGPCD will give priority to the publication of original papers which were not previously published or submitted for reviewing to other journals. Still, a new version of the original work already published, updated and improved, may be accepted if this does not raise exclusive license matters. This issue should nevertheless be mentioned in a footnote. The DEDIC shall not be held legally responsible and shall not pay royalties in case of demands for financial compensations from third parties. In case of acceptance for publishing, JGPCD does not impose the exclusive right to publish and disseminate the paper. The article may be re-published, provided the author makes reference to the first publication by JGPCD.
